

Hypothetical site

This hypothetical site is built along the river in the urban area of south lake city, and is close to schools, medical departments, churches, parks and supermarkets. Residents live easily but the land price is relatively high and there is little available space in this area. At the same time, there are a large number of parks along the river, and the construction of houses here may face the problem of land use rights.

Hypothetical site

This hypothetical site is located in the eastern mountain area of South Lake City. Due to the small number of residents, the infrastructure may be defective, and the surrounding public service facilities are far away, making life inconvenient for residents. The advantage is that the land price is lower, which is more suitable for low- and middle-income people, and the hilly terrain will make the architectural design more diverse.
